PRELIMINARY NOTES

Translation goals always affect the translation outcome. The goal of the English translation of the German General Social Survey (ALLBUS) 2014 is to let interested researchers know what was asked in the survey. Our goal is not to produce a questionnaire that can be fielded in an English speaking community exactly as presented. Some of the translations, for example, are therefore not especially idiomatic; reasons are given below.

Our translations are not heavily annotated. Occasionally we provide additional information, more frequently we quote the original text to clarify reference (e.g. occupational qualifications). In both cases we use pointed brackets '<...>' to identify our comments.

If anyone wants to field ALLBUS items in English, we seriously recommend taking the points we make below into consideration and to adjust the translations to their own survey context. If there are any questions where clarification is needed, we will be happy to help where possible.

Together with ALLBUS 2014, two modules of the International Social Survey Programme (ISSP) were fielded using a split questionnaire. The ISSP questions are not part of this technical report. However, the English ISSP source questionnaires for 2013 (National Identity) and 2014 (Citizenship) can be found on the ISSP website.¹

We would like to take the opportunity to thank our translator for his patience and his valuable professional contribution. David Allison, a native English speaking translator, prepared the translation of new items into English, decisions on the final translation were taken by the ALLBUS-team.

Particular points of relevance

Translation of the German indefinite pronoun 'man':

The German pronoun 'man' is often used when making general statements or when referring to general opinions. In many respects it is therefore similar to the English pronoun 'one'. However, it differs in register, i.e. it is less formal than 'one', and it is used in more and different contexts than 'one' in English. Depending on context, English equivalents for 'man' can therefore be 'one', 'you', 'we' or 'people'.

Gender specific reference:

German and English differ quite a lot in the way the sex of people is referred to. Various differences have meant that we sometimes translated with 'he/she' when the German has indicated the sex differently.

Answer scales:

Translating answer scales can present special challenges for translators. Whereas translations of generic answer scales are readily available, other cases, where the German scale itself is perhaps unusual, require more attention. In the case of generic answer scales, we tried to use standard translations whenever possible. However, we also tried to stay as close to the actual German wording as possible. Thus, some answer scales are immediately recognizable from an English context, other answer scales are similar to standard English practice but reflect a peculiarity in the German wording. In cases where no standard translation was available, we tried to find a translation that reflects the essence of the German wording.

Non-response categories:

ALLBUS 2014 was conducted as a computer-assisted-personal-interview (CAPI) and non-response categories such as 'answer refused', 'don't know' or 'no answer' were generally not read out to respondents. The category 'no answer' is implicitly possible for all questions. We chose not to explicitly document it in this translation.

Routing:

Routing is not documented here. For this information see data handbooks/labels of respective values in data sets.

Here are some opinions about the State and the economy in Germany. Please tell me for each opinion, whether you ...

Completely agree

Completely disagree
Don't know

- A In our society, everybody must see for themselves that they succeed somehow. Joining others in order to fight for one's cause either politically or with a trade union does not provide much help.
 - B The economy only works if entrepreneurs make good profits. Everyone benefits from that in the end.
 - C The State has to make sure that everyone has a job and that prices remain stable, even if the freedom of entrepreneurs has to be curtailed because of this.
 - D The State must ensure that people can live a decent life even in illness, hardship, unemployment and old age.
 - E If social security benefits, such as the continuation of payments in case of illness, unemployment benefits, and early retirement pensions are as high as they are now, then this will only lead to the situation that people do not want to work any more.
 - F All in all, one can live very well in a country like Germany.
 - G By and large, economic profits are nowadays distributed fairly in Germany.
 - H Even if one wanted to, one could hardly make social inequalities any lower than they are here in Germany.

- A In Germany, the old differences between those who own and those who work still persist. One's personal status depends on whether one belongs to the upper or the lower class.
- B In Germany, there are still large differences between social classes. What one can achieve in life substantially depends on one's family background.
- C Germany is an open society. What one achieves in life, does not depend on one's family background anymore, but on the abilities one has and the education one acquires.
- D What one gets in life depends not so much on one's own efforts, but on the economic situation, the situation on the employment market, wage agreements, and the social benefits provided by the State.
- E Income should not be based solely on individual achievement. Instead, everybody should have what they and their family need for a decent life.
- F Only when differences in income and in social standing are large enough, is there an incentive for individual achievement.
- G Differences in status between people are acceptable because they basically reflect what people have made of the opportunities they have had.
- H On the whole, I consider the social differences in our country just.
